Dear Mr. Newell:

I have been contacted by Tanya Collier. It is my understanding that you have interviewed her at length and have had access to her medical records in order to investigate Mercy Corp's executive director who is also Tanya's father.

Ms. Collier told me that you have requested an additional interview with her. She is concerned about your continued demands on her and the emotional toll that is taking.

I have advised her that she does not need to meet with you again because you should have sufficient information from her at this point.

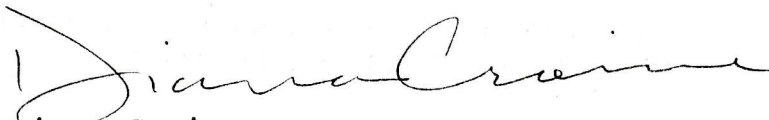

By this letter I am also revoking any and all medical authorizations she has provided to you. Frankly, your obtaining all of her records seems inappropriate.

If your intention is to protect Mercy Corp, you have sufficient information to act. I am rather surprised you did not suspend your executive director pending the completion of an investigation.

On the other hand, if you are acting to protect your executive director, your contact with Ms. Collier was exploitative. She has received correspondence from you on your firm's letterhead, and I know you serve on Mercy Corp's board of directors. To the extent you are performing legal services, I would like to be able to tell Ms. Collier who you represent.

I would appreciate you directing all future communication regarding this matter to me.

Very truly yours,

Diana Craine
